gambling at Ak-sar-ben is less crime infested than that which would occur outside of Aksar-ben?

SENATOR HOAGLAND: Yes, I do. I don't think the gambling at Ak-sar-ben is as serious as big-time bookmaking or casino gambling that can be run by organized crime outside any sort of state control, outside the controls of people like the Ak-sar-ben Board of Governors or anybody else.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Hoagland, if Ak-sar-ben would adopt a rule which would state that a jockey or a trainer who used illegal devices that would stimulate or decrease a horses ability to run at a certain rate and they did not apply this rule uniformly across the board, certain individuals were barred from the track when that happened, others were not barred, would you consider that some shaky activity also connected to big-time gambling at Ak-sar-ben, if that would happen?

SENATOR HOAGLAND: Senator Chambers, I just really don't know enough about the facts of those cases. I would hope those practices don't happen out there. If they do, I am not sure that they are within the control of the State Legislature anyway.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: No, I am not asking you about the State Legislature's control now because we are considering a bill before the Legislature which will place control of other gambling in the hands of law enforcement officials so perhaps there are activities at Ak-sar-ben which should be placed under the control of law enforcement officials rather than the Board of Ak-sar-ben. So here is the question I am asking you. If Ak-sar-ben allows certain trainers to be out there who make use of illegal devices with reference to effecting the ability of a horse to run, do you think Ak-sar-ben should have control of enforcing those kind of regulations or should they be placed in the hands of law enforcement officials?

SENATOR HOAGLAND: I think those practice ought to be stopped and I think we ought to look to Ak-sar-ben first to stop them, and if they are unable to, we should look to the local law enforcement officers to do something about it.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Hoagland, why can't we let the illegal gamblers police themselves in the same way we would let Ak-sar-ben police its own illegality?
